Canada-Mexico Caucus

Canada and Mexico are each other's third largest trading partner, and Canada is the fifth largest foreign investor in Mexico. The relationship has grown rapidly since the entry into force of the NAFTA agreement, but the trilateral formula has eclipsed a dedicated Canada-Mexico dialogue. Compared to other nations, Canada's trade with Mexico is remarkably diversified and of high value. Mexico, with its economic reforms (named top reformer by the OECD), trade-dependent, open economy and a middle class market larger than Canada's entire population, deserves more attention as a vibrant and growing export market that complements many of Canada's strengths.

When Mexico does well, Canadian businesses do well. Yet at the moment, this space is underserved. There is no organized forum or entity in Canada to act as a business liaison for Canadian business interests in Mexico. This project seeks to fill this gap. Regardless of the current geopolitical forces, Mexico will continue to be a crucial relationship for Canada. The project will make the case of the importance—and untapped potential—of this bilateral relationship and will create a vibrant Canada-Mexico business caucus in Canada.
